- Students will be able to express actions and the corresponding consequences , based on fact or the result of speculation .

Palabras claves en idioma (keywords)

Would

Simple past

Base form

- Objetivo general: El alumno podrá expresar causas en inglés y describir sus efectos y consecuencias.

Nombre de la unidad: Acciones y consecuencias reales, futuras e hipotéticas.

UNIDAD II

Objetivo de la unidad:
Establecer consecuencias hipotéticas.

SO...

What would YOU do if you won the lottery!?

Maxine would buy a new house for herself and her parents if she won the lottery.

If Paul won the lottery, he'd take a trip around the world.

John and his wife would buy a piano if they became rich.

We use unreal conditionals in English to talk about:

A situation that is not real, but that we imagine . . .

If I had a million dollars . . . I would ...

If I lived in Italy . . . I would . . .

If I got a job as a chef . . . I would . . .

Are these real situations?

- Do I really have a million dollars?
- Do I really live in Italy?
- Do I really work as a chef?

NO! these are imaginary situations

How do we make this type of conditional grammar? Look at these examples:

1. If my friend asked me for money, I would lend it to her.
2. Tomas would be happier if he got a less stressful job.
3. Speaking in English would be easier if you practiced more frequently.

After the IF, use simple past tense.

In the other clause, use would + verb.

Form & Meaning:

When you imagine a future happening like this, you use a past tense form after IF;

However, the meaning is NOT past.

Ex. If I moved to a big city, I'd sell my car.

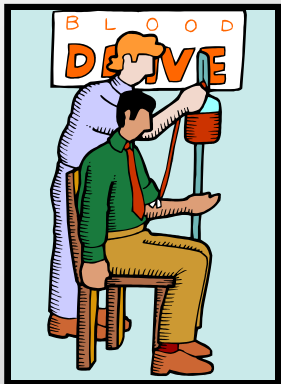

The meaning here is NOT past tense . . .

I didn't move away and I didn't sell my car.

I'm imagining a future possibility.

Try these examples:

1. If we had (have) more time and money, we would take (take) a vacation to Hawaii.

2. The world would be (be) a better place if everyone helped (help) others.
