The Mexican Journal of Bioethics is a publication of the Autonomous University of the State of Hidalgo for the dissemination of bioethical knowledge, from a multidisciplinary vision.

In this edition, various topics with bioethical implications.

The study of chromosomopathies is important in bioethics, since parenthood requires genetic counseling and prior information for decision-making, without ceasing to follow the principles that protect the dignity of the fetus. In relation to this, another topic that the magazine contains is the evolution of surrogacy over the years and the new challenges for its implementation, which entails a controversy from bioethics, since the risk of attacking the dignity of those who facilitate their body for the procedure of this form of assisted fertilization. On the other hand, a study is also presented on the intersection of bioethics and the rights of people with disabilities, since their autonomy and dignity can be affected by the state of vulnerability in which society places them. The topic of violence against women and reproductive rights is also addressed, since they are in a situation of serious risk since abuses against their autonomy can have serious effects on the exercise of these rights, which is why health personnel must providing care with respect and empathy, which undoubtedly requires adherence to bioethical principles. Finally, a study of local governance and bioethics is presented based on a study of the challenges of aging in the state of Hidalgo, from the years 1999-2024, which shows the importance of protecting and promoting rights. of older adults.

My thanks to the team of this magazine for their great work to spread knowledge in Bioethics.

"Love, Order, and Progress".
