Presentación Editorial

The Administrative Sciences Journal contributes with researchers to the dissemination of their work of interest in the administrative fields for academic peers, students, alumni with other avant-garde topics. In this edition, topics such as Economic Polarization in the State of Hidalgo are discussed, to understand the characteristics of development in companies and underdevelopment with high levels of poverty around the state. We also present the Business Case of the Dairy Products Association de Santa Ana (Asolesan), an example of local economy and development. And in this same situation share the culinary diagnosis of traditional kitchens in the State of Hidalgo.

On the other hand, we have been concerned with topics of interest to students, considering in the first instance a tool to help in communication such as the cell phone in class, so we share the article Phubbing: interference in communication within the classroom, at the same time we reflect on Innovation in Tourism education, which supports the development of student competencies and strengthens our field of knowledge.
