

Editorial

Today, the commitment of universities to disseminate academic research is essential to resolving the problems of society. Where the work of researchers opening the discussion on economic and social issues that are fundamental to Mexico and the rest of the world.

The Administrative Sciences Journal, looking for research that helps to solve these problems make work available on innovative and highly interesting issues for the academic community.

Today tourism requires alternatives to benefit communities and to provide cultural and natural resources through sustainable options such as the route set up in the municipality of Huichapan Hidalgo.

This publication sets out the problem of “Human capital of Mexican returning migrants”, this is so visible in the face of the political and economic changes that are being presented today.

Similarly, the theme of “Diversifying the financial needs of the entrepreneurial ecosystem is discussed: a multidimensional scaling analysis applied to data from a financial intelligence platform”.

Incorporated with the work on “Information and communication technologies as a competitive performance factor in provider institutions of medical services in Ensenada Baja California”.

Hoping to offer our readers experiences and reflections on the work done by researchers and experts in the administrative and economic sciences.