

Editorial

Presentación Editorial

Academic publications clearly show work at universities, as well as generating knowledge in various areas of knowledge. From the point of view of content, the problems affecting the various economic and social sectors are shown, together with identifying trends and prospective.

One of the primary tasks of the University is research, which has to be visible to the public, and therefore the importance of academic magazines, as they are the most effective means for the dissemination of research work. This is why the Journal of Administrative Sciences is an open window that allows the spread of various related areas and institutions for this issue, you will find a diversity of research from examples of organizations to social responsibility in various countries.

In such a way that the description of organization examples adapted to current economic and social requirements enable a picture of decision-making and as a basis for new projects. When we look at successful stories, these motivate us to continue to investigate or improve the projects presented, especially if these have a relevance that impacts the social or economic sectors.

Analyzing other countries means understanding other scales and organizations, from social, economic, technological, among others. Many of these countries are pioneers in economic and political models that change human geography. Of which trends in models that have an impact on foreign policy and which are generating trends and global development, acknowledging greater importance in situations such as those we are currently experiencing through the pandemic that have generated innovative policies that address local and global problems.

Finally, and by returning to the subject of social responsibility, this publication presents the article on social responsibility in Colombia, through a look at the challenges facing a university and a leather goods company.

As you can see, the diversity and importance of the issues raised in this edition of the journal of administrative science is an attractive option for learning current and highly relevant topics at the global level.
